“Battle of the Books”

The Battle of the Books program is a local literacy program developed through the Chicago Public Schools with support from NCLIS and many sponsors. Students, grades 4-6 and grades 7-8, competed on teams to answer questions about a designated reading list. Before the day of competition, each school team receives a reading list, designates who should read what book, and discusses the books read.

Excerpt from Initial Summary of April 2007 Evaluation of Battle of the Books, submitted by Allison Druin, NCLIS Commissioner, June 2007.
